The case was submitted to the treasury department and yesterday a decision was rendered to the effect that the Chinaman had a right to his journey and that [illegible] would [illegible] the operation of the Chinese [illegible]

Mrs. Scoville's Trial.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—In the trial of Mrs. Scoville's insanity to-day, after the reading of a number of letters from Scoville to his wife, threatening to have her put in the insane asylum unless she kept roaming around the country, Mrs. Scoville took the stand. There was but little in her testimony but the rehearsal of the old story of domestic infelicity in the family. She denied she had been intimate with Early or Fitzgerald, or [illegible] though the latter wrote her about a [illegible] full of letters. She denied she became [illegible] growing younger [illegible] and found and hid three pistols [illegible] to her husband, for fear he might want to [illegible] on her. The Scovilles and [illegible] never could live together. She [illegible] father a little cracked and her brother [illegible] Cross-examination developed nothing of interest.

THE PENN CENTENNIAL.

The Exercises in Philadelphia the Grandest that Ever Occurred in that City. Vast Crowds and Grand Hall Decorations.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—[illegible]

THE LANDING SCENE [illegible]

[illegible]

Shortly after 9 o'clock the boats, steam barges and other vessels to the number of about 60 formed in line in the vicinity of League Island, some two miles south of the city proper, and followed in the wake of the Welcome, a Danish bark, fitted up to represent the original vessel on which Penn came over.

The founder was impersonated by Frank L. Van [illegible]. After a few simple ceremonies aboard the Welcome the latter was taken in tow by a tug and brought up to the city. As she passed the North Atlantic squadron, anchored below the point chosen for Penn's landing, she was saluted by the Tennessee's guns and returned the salute.

The wharf where the landing took place was Dock street, said to be just where Penn's original landing was effected. At half past 10, Penn stepped over the side of the Welcome, and as he did so the scene was lively beyond description; boat bells being rung, steam whistles on every side blown, guns fired and the multitude cheered. On the landing wharf were assembled some 50 or 60 persons dressed to represent the Swedes, Dutch, natives and others who were delegated to receive Penn, and [illegible] Edward [illegible] Knight, president of the [illegible] Thos. M. Watson, chief marshal [illegible] Then the crowd formed [illegible] Penn and Knight [illegible] composed of [illegible] Swedes, Dutch and Indians, and the Friends who founded the colony brought hither by [illegible] the executive committee of the association first devised and superintended the demonstration, the whole making a

WONDERFULLY LIVELY SPECTACLE.

Dock street was crowded with from 10,000 to 15,000 people. A place was being kept clear by ropes for the procession for the march to Blue Anchor Inn, where the original Penn went for refreshments after landing, but the police arrangements were defective and the crowd broke through the cordons at all points on Dock street, and there was an utter disruption [illegible] of hissing and [illegible] The police [illegible] Penn and his company, however, and the welcome at Blue Anchor Inn, corner Second and Dock streets, was carried out. Then followed the grand landing day demonstration, one of the finest affairs ever witnessed here. The line of parade was formed on Broad street, [illegible] Shortly after 1 p. m. when the great procession moved in [illegible] divisions. Along the entire route of the procession the streets, sidewalks, windows, doorways and roofs of houses, and stands erected for the purpose were crowded. Everywhere was the same [illegible] of flags, bunting, pictures of Penn, [illegible] and above all, [illegible] of people.

Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The cabinet meeting to-day was mainly devoted to the consideration of army affairs and department. Secretaries Folger and Teller were absent. Promotions in the army consequent upon the retirement of Major-General McDowell were considered, but the president did not designate any officers selected for promotion, and it is understood that the matter will remain in abeyance until after his return from New York. It was reported to the meeting that [illegible] square has been selected as the site for the new pension office.

Report of the Surgeon-General.

The report of the surgeon general of the army shows among the white troops the total number of cases of all kinds taken on the sick list during the past year was 34,880, being at the rate of 16[illegible] per 1000 of mean strength. Among the colored troops, 179 or 1689 per thousand of the mean strength. There were 216 deaths among the white troops and 25 among the colored, [illegible] among the Indian troops.

Application was made to the company for the [illegible] for the payment of this amount, and on [illegible] last, it was paid into the U. S. treasury.

POLITICAL.

Political Assessments.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Gen. N. Curtis, an employe of the treasury department in the New York custom house, it will be remembered, was imprisoned by the U. S. court of the southern district of New York for violating the statute against levying political assessments. His case came up [illegible] in the U. S. supreme court this afternoon on an application for a writ of habeas corpus to release him and bring his case before the court for review. Attorney General Smith, of counsel for the petitioner, recited the facts on which the petition was based. His first point was that the court below had no jurisdiction, because Gen. Sale of Redwood Timber.

The last purchase of Redwood timber lands for eastern account, by the Buffalo syndicate, during the past summer, has created a demand among some of our local capitalists. Very recently Messrs. Pyton & Curtis, bankers of Nevada, in conjunction with [illegible] Low, manager of the Anglo-California bank of this city, purchased about seven thousand acres on Eel river, Humboldt county, known as the Ralston tract. The price paid is reported at $100,000. This syndicate proposes to build a railway from this tract to tide water at Humboldt bay, a distance of some 20 miles. Prominent lumbermen of Chicago and Detroit have had representatives here at various times during the past year with a view to ultimately using the red wood for finishing work in the place of white pine. Ex-President Fillmore's son is one of the Buffalo syndicate, which is said to have made one of the most valuable selections in the state.

ARIZONA.

Indian Outbreak Stopped.

Prescott, Oct. 24.—Authentic news received at headquarters here confirm the report that General Crook has effectually stopped the Indian outbreak that at one time seemed inevitable at San Carlos. The report of the grand jury at Tucson shows [illegible] and laborious work which has been performed by General Crook since he has assumed command in Arizona. He has been constantly traveling from one point to another, holding conferences with different Indian tribes. He first discovered that frauds were being practiced at San Carlos, and discontent caused amongst the different bands on that account, and through his action checked what promised upon his arrival at the reservation to be another long and bloody war. Reports received at the military headquarters confirm the entire report of the U. S. grand jury.

An Unfortunate Mistake.

Tombstone, Oct. 24.—Thos. Ewing has just arrived here bringing tidings of a hair breadth escape while encamped on the Sonora river. Ewing said that some parties unknown to himself and party in the darkness tried to run his stock off. A battle ensued in consequence in which one man named Flanagan was killed and two prisoners were taken. Ewing escaped. He afterwards ascertained his assailants were custom house officers.

Another gentleman since arrived states the custom officers were riding along the main road, looking for smugglers, and seeing a fire near the road, rode forward to investigate. They were received with a volley, which they returned, killing one man. Another dropped his pistol at the commencement of the fight and ran. Two others were captured and taken to Arispe. The guards stated they supposed they were dealing with smugglers and [illegible] fire until fired upon.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Seattle News Budget.

Seattle, Oct. 24.—James Bennett, first mate of the ship Harvester, was to-day sentenced to two years and a half imprisonment in the United States penitentiary of the territory, and George Lilly, second mate of the same ship to twelve months in the same, for cruelty practiced upon the seamen during the late voyage from Philadelphia. Each man was further sentenced to pay the costs of his prosecution.

The steamer Eliza Hayward left [illegible] at eight o'clock on Saturday morning last and arrived here safely this afternoon.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

News from our Neighbors.

Victoria, Oct. 23.—The war ship Kingfisher sailed for the scene of the wreck off the coast at midnight.

Arthur D. Berton, a young merchant, shot himself through the heart and afterwards through the head early this morning in [illegible] Porter's stable. The cause of the suicide is unknown. [illegible] was aged only 22.

Later.—Dense fogs hang over the west coast. The Kingfisher, which went to the relief of the distressed vessel, returned [illegible] this morning, and again went to sea.

The election in Yale district for member of the local house resulted in the complete overthrow of the government by a majority of nearly two to one.

The suicide of young Berton would seem to have been effected with great deliberation. He left a letter for his mother, who is in England, and which was not opened. The cause is attributed to temporary insanity. He was young, wealthy, steady and temperate, and his awful act surprises and confounds his friends.

British Columbia Amenities.

A WAVE OF LUXURY.

Newport Life in Season—Cooks, Coachmen and Grooms at Immense Salaries.

From the New York Times.

No one who visited Newport this season, after a few years' absence, could fail to be struck with the astonishing wave of luxury which has rolled over that abode of American fashion. A few years ago people told their wonderful country cousins how Mr. This and Mr. That had French cooks to whom they paid $50 a month. This season there were probably thirty people who had cooks at salaries of from $85 to $150 a month, and whose monthly expenses for living were not less than [illegible]. Many of these families have altogether twenty servants, of whom [illegible] are men, several being in livery. In fact, the town is alive with smart grooms in buckskin and topboots. And it is no long ago that a lady was almost [illegible] in New York for riding with a groom [illegible] behind her. And even ten years ago very few owners of carriages ventured on anything in the way of a livery beyond trousers of which [illegible] a "horsey" line and a [illegible] of velvet ribbon [illegible] remarkably stupid and inappropriate piece of ornamentation, by the way—around their servants' hats, while there certainly were not two people who drove with the servants in the box. The modern Newport, the upper town, only began to grow about forty years ago, and grew, at first very slowly; one, at least, of the pioneers is still residing on the spot he so judiciously selected. The early villas were extremely plain, both without and within; the later are highly ornate without, and [illegible] of luxurious appointments within, presenting [illegible] appearance of sumptuous [illegible] which is most attractive. Villa life [illegible] in this country [illegible] for with anything [illegible] which the world has ever seen. There [illegible] to be spent, and the manners and customs [illegible] of the country do not favor the [illegible] old world. It is [illegible] the rush of wealth should have come [illegible] with an artistic period. Money in the hands of those who did not know how [illegible]

THE FALSE PROPHET [illegible]

Cairo, Oct. 24.—Most alarming news has been received from Khartoum. The false prophet at the head of the whole [illegible] population of [illegible] Soudan, reinforced by some [illegible] tribes of Central Africa, has publicly defied Abdel Kader and defeated the Egyptian governors in several sanguinary battles. The Egyptian loss in killed and wounded was 3,000, with their stands of arms, including 50,000 Remingtons. The remnant of the Egyptian army took refuge in Khartoum and is now besieged there. All the provinces south of that city are lost to Egypt.

News of the capture of Khartoum is daily expected. [illegible] the capital of Kordofan has been besieged for [illegible] days; its capture is expected. An attack on Khartoum will follow.

TERRIBLE TORTURES [illegible]

The false prophet permits the pouring of boiling tallow into the eyes and ears of [illegible] captives, and otherwise frequently tortured them. These [illegible] in some cases, actually [illegible] their prisoners for refusing to recognize him as the true prophet [illegible] Dr. Schweinfurth [illegible] that there is a movement for the revival of Islam, [illegible] Afghanistan and Morocco, and the doctor is sure that the movement will [illegible] The prophet's adherents [illegible] and the prophet himself is said to be marching toward Cairo. The Egyptian government [illegible] denies that the [illegible] any share in the defeat of the Egyptian troops during the late war. The authorities attribute the result to other causes.

Arabi Pasha's Trial.

Alexandria, Oct. 24.—It is unofficially reported that the Egyptian government [illegible] to abandon the prosecution of Arabi Pasha. It is charged this action is due to the expressed views of the authorities [illegible] Constantinople.

Arabi Pasha's correspondence [illegible] the last two years was seized this morning and deposited with Sir Edward Malet, British consul-general. It includes voluminous correspondence with Constantinople and the minister of [illegible] sittings of the [illegible] cabinet.

The evidence against Arabi Pasha is said to be very strong. His correspondence with the sultan is highly incriminating.

It is thought the entire proceedings against the rebels awaiting trial may be stopped by a decree of the [illegible] and amnesty to the others.

Much anxiety is felt in the interior among the [illegible] owing to the appointment of several of Arabi's officers in government [illegible]

Arabi says the events [illegible] going to succeed in any other national movement [illegible] to the sultan. The happiness of Egypt makes it necessary for a virtuous government of the country by the English.

Devastating Flames in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24.—A fire broke out this morning in the large lumber yards by the river Neva and is still raging. Incendiary fires have broken out in several different parts of [illegible] The entire place is threatened with destruction.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 24.—The loss by fire in the timber yards along the river Neva is estimated at [illegible] roubles. [illegible] for miles around St. Petersburg. The city has been covered for some days with a dense smoke.

Later.—The fire in the timber yards on the bank of the Neva river have been extinguished, with a loss of 2,500,000 roubles. The property is insured for one-half that amount in Russian and English companies.

The Prussian Election.

Berlin, Oct. 24.—Further reports regarding the election for electors of members of the Diet show the extreme right, and [illegible] are not gainers to the extent of [illegible] seats. The national liberals lost ten seats. An election stocker in Westphalia appears [illegible] the government is making every endeavor to prevent an alliance of the conservatives and the clerical party, and to effect a union of free conservatives and the moderate national liberals.

The Milan Assassination.

London, Oct. 24.—A dispatch from Belgrade says: As the king of Milan entered the cathedral between two rows of people, the woman Markowitch fired at him with a large revolver. The [illegible] a female spectator. The [illegible] beat the king's assailant until [illegible] minister of war interfered.

The Presse says the king of Milan's assailant has been suffering from melancholia ever since the execution of her husband and she can scarcely be considered responsible for her actions.

Revolt in Afghanistan.

Calcutta, Oct. 24.—The ameer of Afghanistan has appointed his son to the governorship of Herat, dismissing the former governor, Abdul Khan. As a consequence of this change considerable excitement prevails. Serious disturbances are threatened. The inhabitants in the vicinity of Cabul revolted and killed the governor.

Protest against Parliament.

London, Oct. 24.—The Irish parliamentary party, after a conference, have decided to insist that an inquiry be made into the question of Gray's imprisonment with a view of restricting the judge's action in the matter. Mr. [illegible] will [illegible] addition to the [illegible] the discussion of the practical workings of the land act. Lord Randolph Churchill in opening the business of parliament, to-day, moved an immediate adjournment [illegible] protest against the unconstitutional method pursued in assembling in this body.

Beware of the New League.

Dublin, Oct. 24.—P. J. Smith, member of parliament for Tipperary, a moderate nationalist, has written a letter in which he says the recent national conference was not a representative one. He warns his countrymen against the new movement, which he describes as shame, deceit and fraud. Its only object, he declares, is to get money, which will never be accounted for, to support Ireland's worst enemies.

Awaiting Trial.

Dublin, Oct. 24.—The trial of the murderers of the Joyce family, near Cong, begins about the 4th of November. The attorney general has decided to try the prisoners in batches of two at a time. Justice Barry will preside.

Storms in England.

London, Oct. 24.—A wind and sleet storm which started London early this morning is still raging, and meagre dispatches report snow and hail storms in various parts of England. In several localities rivers have overflowed their banks. Telegraph communication [illegible] seriously interfered with that no estimate of the damage can be given.

Terrors of the Typhoon.

Madrid, Oct. 24.—An official dispatch from Manila, dated the 21st, states a typhoon destroyed all the wooden and thatched houses and carried away iron and tinned roofs of others. Sixty thousand families are homeless. The barracks, hospitals, government offices and factories are destroyed. The loss of life, however, is relatively small. Malacca and [illegible] were also devastated. Communication is interrupted between Manila and towns on the island of Luzon.

The house then adjourned until Thursday, when Salisbury will [illegible] question regarding the Egyptian policy of the government after the vote of thanks to the army has been passed.

The Ohio Election.

Cincinnati Commercial, Oct. [illegible]

The republicans of Ohio have been fooled away. Gov. Foster, advertising for the United States senate, and Richard Smith, advertising for the people [illegible] what might be expected. Ohio [illegible] republican only with [illegible] has been driven off [illegible] democrats [illegible] Not one of them, [illegible] a knowledge of wet [illegible] never thought anything else. There was no temperance issue before the people of Ohio. The whole disturbance was upon false pretenses from the start. The republicans had only to stand to their policy as declared in the reelection of Gov. Foster to win, but they have been betrayed by the ridiculous [illegible] of irrepressible leaders. The question whether the manufacture or sale of liquor shall be prohibited in Ohio was no more before the people than the woman suffrage fancy, [illegible] is a moral issue [illegible] upon which the [illegible] republican party must not [illegible] There is no other chance for [illegible] about the evils of intemperance. The prohibition of license in the constitution has for 30 years [illegible] free trade in liquor. This is the fault of the temperance extremists as well as of the liquor lords. The republicans promised to submit the [illegible] to the people through the present legislature, and they rushed in and flung at us the Pond bill three days before the spring election. [illegible] The Scott law was added to the load [illegible] The republican state convention allowed the party a chance, but Richard Smith and Gov. Foster were displeased. They had to break [illegible] the platform [illegible] and the [illegible] new relation and would not have peace in the party. NOT A PERSONAL CONTEST.

This journal has no disposition to thresh over the old straw of the late senatorial contest. During its progress nearly all phases of the contest underwent discussion with iteration and reiteration. But in the heat of the struggle there was little opportunity to separate the personal phases of the contest from its broader, more general and permanent features. A word on this part of the subject now may not be amiss. Spoken with truth, candor and moderation, it may contribute something towards clearing away certain misapprehensions, and consequently may help to a better understanding among all the parties who participated in the contest.

The republican majority divided at the outset, two-thirds pronouncing for a particular man and the other one-third taking their stand against him, but presenting no candidate. Now it is a mistake to suppose that the opposition to the candidate whom the two-thirds supported rested on motives as narrow and unworthy as mere personal hatred or malice towards him, or any desire to wrest from him and his adherents, and turn over to his opponents, the advantages of office and power, which many seem to think the only objects of effort in contests of this kind. There was a higher purpose than personal dislike, or a desire for "spoils." It was an effort to defeat the scheme of a personal party, a scheme based on the power of the "organized offices," a scheme to which everything that could be brought into "the pool" was organized to contribute; and it was a protest against the kind of politics to which such a scheme always leads.

This it was, and no merely personal contest against a particular candidate, except in so far as it was impossible to separate the man from the system of politics which he was understood to represent. Incidental to this, and as a means of throwing light upon the contest pressed in his behalf and of furnishing additional reasons for supporting the opposition, there was examination of his history, character and methods—an ordeal to which every man must expect to submit who offers himself for high public station.

Had the "organized effort" been made in behalf of any other candidate; had "the machine" been organized and controlled in the interest of any one else, with office-holders and place-seekers and the whole crowd who take part in efforts of this kind for what can be made out of their working in the same direction, there would have been like opposition, though it is not probable that materials could have been found in the history and methods of any other candidate to make the opposition so effective. In both parties there are large numbers who would like to put political effort on a higher plane than that of a mere scramble for spoils. The history of both parties in our state is too much a history of scrambles of this kind, which have been creditable to neither, but hurtful to both, and costly to the state.

There is a deep feeling among the people that the prizes of politics ought not to go to men who attempt to possess them by these methods. In such contests the public interests are forgotten, real merit is obscured, and the prizes, when this mode of political action is allowed to win, are seized by the men who are most fertile in the expedients of intrigue and corruption. There always will be, as there always ought to be, earnest protest against these methods, and by consequence resolute opposition on proper occasion to those who pursue them.

Any attempt to build up for a man a support based on the interests of the class who make politics a professional occupation and seek to use party as a means for selfish ends, will inevitably be met by resistance and if resistance by ordinary methods will not avail, then by revolt. But men as a rule do not lightly reject the usages of party; they are willing to allow full force to party authority when they can do so without yielding to manifest abuses, and it is always easier and more agreeable to conform to party law when the circumstances will at all allow it than to undertake the serious labor of opposition and resistance. Nevertheless opposition and resistance will be made—there will be men to make it—on every occasion when the free course of party action is affected or changed by the introduction of methods which are essentially corrupt, unequal and unfair. There will always be protest against the use or promise of places in the public service to produce results; and the man who stands as an exponent of this system of politics, that is, of "the machine," must always expect opposition, and can never be anything else than a disturber of his party, or more than the leader of the worst faction in it. We do not deny party usage. We do not deny the principle that a majority should rule. But there is no principle of party action which may not be abused, and therefore no rule of party action which is not subject to exceptions and limitations. Party usage, to be binding, must be supported by unexceptionable party methods, and the men who are presented in the name of party must be men whose characters conform to the ordinary standards of personal and political morality. No one expects to find in politics the best examples of saintliness; it is not pretended that complete sanctification is a political doctrine; but it is insisted, and by a constantly increasing number of people, that parties shall not be ruled by combinations founded on spoils, and that the candidates of party, to secure support, must be men whose strength is in their own worthiness rather than in "the machine." Had Mr. Mitchell been such a candidate he would have been elected in spite of all the dislike of personal opponents.

The commissioner of pensions has just issued his report for the last fiscal year, from which it appears that on June 30 there were on the rolls 285,695 persons, of whom 178,401 were widows, minor children or dependent relatives of soldiers or sailors who had fought in the civil war. There remain on the pension rolls 7134 survivors of the war of 1812, and the somewhat extraordinary number of 24,661 widows of those who served in that war. Of the veterans of 1812, 1764 seem to have died during the year, a mortality of about 20 per cent., while among the widows the deaths were apparently but 1365, a mortality of a little over 5 per cent. The net increase on the entire list during the year was 16,867 against 18,028 for the year ending June 30, 1881. There are 290,965 claims, or more than the entire number already enrolled, now pending. The annual expenditure for pensions, which at the close of the war was some sixteen millions of dollars, has now, including payments on account of arrears, reached about fifty-six millions. The total disbursements for pensions made during the last twenty years amount to $560,611,324, a total which, under existing laws, will certainly be exceeded by the expenditures chargeable to the same source during the next ten years.

Out of over 11,000 reserve men in the British army, who were called out in July, only 480 failed to appear without giving reasons for their disobedience. Over 10,500 men appeared and were mustered into service, and every one of these had passed into the reserve corps within 18 months. This is certainly a fine record for the men, and one of which England may well be proud.

The recent exposition at Denver, though a fine affair, was a financial failure. It is stated that the grounds, building and furniture cost $235,000, and only $100,000 of the bonds were sold; while nearly every man who bought a special privilege in the building lost heavily. The managers went into the scheme with only $75,000 in hand, and ran "on tick" recklessly.

A WORD FOR OREGON.

The Coast Review, published at San Francisco, and which is the insurance journal of the Pacific coast, has an article containing unfavorable strictures and animadversions aimed at the Oregon Fire and Marine Insurance Co. That journal appears to have become incensed at the temerity of Oregon in venturing to have an insurance company without asking the consent of the California companies, and the Coast Review says: "We understand the company is not doing business, yet has ever thought it necessary to have its subscribed capital paid in, or any considerable part on it least." Again: "What is the financial standing of this company? We respectfully ask the managers of the Oregon local to inform the public as to the standing of their company." There are various other questions of similar character, answers to which might have been obtained had the Coast Review sent its inquiries by a letter to the proper sources. The OREGONIAN is and always has been an advocate of the interests of the northwest. It regards the protection and conservation of these interests of paramount importance. Its inquiries in the present case have resulted in the information that the Oregon company was launched with the express understanding that all its subscribed capital was to be called up as fast as suitable investment for the same could be found. The authorized capital of the company is $500,000, the subscribed capital is $150,000, of which 40 per cent. is already paid in, cash, not notes; and a resolution is recorded that the balance shall be called up within the first year. We do not think that any of the companies of which the Coast Review from time to time presents deserved laudation can show a record superior to this. That journal also says: "At one time we incidentally learned that an agency of the Oregon company would soon be opened in San Francisco." Whenever that time shall arrive we are well assured that the Oregon company will comply with the laws of California, and afford ample assurance of stability. In the meantime, while men of business like Messrs. H. W. Corbett, W. S. Ladd, C. H. Lewis, Henry Failing, M. S. Burrell, Charles Hodge and others see fit to insure largely in the local company, the objections of an outside review will do little harm. We have written this purely in the interests of an Oregon enterprise and because it is an Oregon enterprise; and while not one word is intended against other admirable insurance companies doing business here, we believe an Oregon enterprise, in this line or any other, when founded on a substantial basis, is entitled to consideration. Oregon can certainly have solid insurance companies, as well as other solid undertakings.

PENNSYLVANIA COAL.

The coal industry in Pennsylvania has been developed to amazing proportions. Statistics recently published show that the production in 1881 amounted to 52,504,018 tons, an increase over the next preceding year of 10,057,310 tons, or not much less than one-fourth. Assuming the coal produced in 1881 to have been worth $3 75 per ton on an average upon delivery to the consumer, the total value of the output for that year was $196,890,067. The number of persons employed in mining coal, including both outside and inside hands was 116,895, of whom it is estimated that 98,516 were men and the remainder, or one-fifth of the whole number, were boys. If each of the adults represented a family of six persons—and that is regarded as a moderate estimate since miners are proverbially men of large families—the number of people in Pennsylvania dependent upon coal mining for the means of subsistence was 561,096, or more than one-eighth of the entire population of the state. The estimated value of the product is equal to $1683 per hand on the average. But it must be remembered this was the value on reaching the consumer, and out of it must come the compensation of those who are employed in the transportation and sale of coal, who together make up an army of no small dimensions, as well as the profits of mine-owners, the cost of machinery, and so on. The coke burners are also a vast multitude. Their ovens cover with smoke by day, and light up with flame by night, large districts in nearly all parts of the state. Perhaps all the classes dependent on the coal industry together, including their families, number 100,000,000 persons, or one-fourth of the population of the state. There are those who think that before the end of the century the Pennsylvania output will reach 100,000,000 tons a year, worth say $375,000,000, and that more than a million and a half of people will be dependent upon coal-mining in that one state for their subsistence. This is by far the greatest of all Pennsylvania's industries except agriculture, and its greatness can not be attributed in any considerable degree to protection. It is great, like agriculture, in spite of protection rather than because of it. It is burdened by high-tariff taxes on nearly everything that miners use, and would no doubt be more prosperous if the system to which Pennsylvanians are so firmly wedded were abolished root and branch.

Of all the political fusions of this year the funniest has been made in Shelby county, Tennessee, of which Memphis is the chief city. There the low-tax democrats and the low-tax republicans have "jined drives," buried the hatchet, and are howling together for victory. The funny part of it is that in return for support of Bate, the low-tax and regular democratic candidate for governor, by the low-tax republicans, the low tax or regular democrats agree to vote for two negro candidates for the legislature. To offset this fusion the high-tax democrats will fuse with the high-tax or regular republicans, the latter to vote for two white democrats for the legislature in return for the former's votes for Hawkins, the regular republican candidate for governor. Tennessee politics are frightfully mixed this year, but in no section of the state more so than in and around Memphis.

The official returns in Ohio give the democrats fourteen and the republicans seven representatives in congress. In one district the republican majority is only 15, in another only 42 votes.

A Tariff Man.

New York Times.

Mr. John Roach explained to the tariff commissioners the other day at great length that the prosperity of the United States is due solely to the protective tariff. There can be no doubt that Mr. Roach is right, for the doctrine that protection makes a country prosperous is based upon two axioms, and therefore must be true. These axioms are that it is cheaper to pay two dollars than one for any given article, and that any two persons can make themselves independently rich by persistently swapping jack-knives. It is the first of these axioms that convinces every fair-minded man who buys a protected American blanket for $8 that he would lose money if the tariff permitted him to buy an imported blanket of the same quality for $4. It is the second of these axioms which Mr. Roach has in mind when he says that the tariff has made the whole country prosperous; for if the shopkeeper receives high prices for his protected goods, and the workman who buys them and who is employed by the shopkeeper to repair his counter receives high wages, so that he can buy food and clothes, both the shopkeeper and the workman handle comparatively large sums of money, and enjoy precisely the sort of prosperity which is achieved by two persons who swap jack-knives, who can claim that in the course of a day they have handled property of the aggregate value of several hundred dollars.

The Fall Elections.

Chicago Times.

The complete democratic victory in Ohio will have a very discouraging effect on the bosses in New York and Pennsylvania. The prospects of the election of Folger and Beaver have been at no time promising, and the result in Ohio will give such an impulse to the independent movement in those states that their defeat may be counted on as a moral certainty. In Pennsylvania it is believed that the overthrow of the republican party in Ohio will give the independents every anti-machine vote, and a [illegible] for Stewart is predicted. This would put Stewart far ahead of Beaver, and make the independents masters of the party for the future. The result in Ohio will also swell the ranks of the men in New York who are unwilling to vote for a candidate nominated by federal dictation and by machine maneuvers, and no power of the administration must be exerted to the utmost if Folger is to escape an overwhelming defeat.

A dispatch from Toronto states that a fourth-class clerk in the post office has been arrested for the theft of letters and over $1000 in currency was found in his room. If this is the record of fourth-class clerks, a first-class one ought to have quite a good living.

A stranger paced gloomily up and down Main street about 7 o'clock a night or two ago and finally stopped before a group of citizens. "Are all the clothing and furnishing goods stores in this town closed to-night?" he asked. "They are," was the sad reply. "Where is the nearest town where they keep open during the evening?" was the next inquiry. "What's yer trouble, anyhow?" asked one of the citizens. "Why, yer see, my suspenders have broke down," said the thoughtful stranger, as he took hold of himself on each side and moved down the street.—Norwich Bulletin.

"If you are not careful somebody will have your pocketbook," said a well dressed young man to a stranger in New York. A few minutes later he felt for his pocketbook. It was gone. So was the young man.

UNION COUNTY.

Progress and Growth during the last few Years.

Mountain Sentinel.

A review of the progress and growth of Union county during the last eight years will prove good for reflection. Most of us realize that the county is much wealthier now than eight years ago, but few know the actual increase in dollars and cents. Every class and kind of property, except cattle and quartz holdings, has doubled in value since 1874, and much of it has increased at a greater rate. We have taken the assessment rolls as the basis of our calculations, and while they are fairly accurate in the number of articles, in no case give the exact or even approximate value thereof.

In 1874 there were in this county 5165 horses and mules, valued at $1[illegible]341. In 1882 we find 16,000, valued at over half a million dollars. The greatest increase between these dates was between the years 1878 and 1881, when the numbers ran up from 7351 at a valuation of $[illegible], to 16,000, valued at $[illegible]. This year's assessment was made on mules and horses at an average valuation of about $31 25 per head, which does not represent more than half their actual value, as any well informed stockman will certify. Cattle have increased but little. Vast numbers have been reared in the county but have been driven to an eastern market. The number of cattle in 1874 was [illegible],122, valued at $174,342. The number has increased to about 20,000, valued at $[illegible]. The valuation on cattle is also very much below the present ruling rates, the average valuation being $9, while yearlings are worth $[illegible] and other ages from $16 to $30. In sheep the county has made great progress, the number in 1874 being 4,[illegible] and at present 37,435. Sheep, and we might add all classes of property, have been assessed at but one-half their actual value; for instance, improved lands are assessed on an average at about $7 per acre, while the ruling rates therefor in the market are about double that figure.

Eight years ago the gross valuation of property assessed was $1,398,424, and total amount of taxable property, after deducting indebtedness and exempted articles, was $[illegible]. The assessment roll just completed shows a gross valuation of over three millions and taxable property to the value of $1,[illegible],757, the increase during the last year in taxable property being $[illegible]. The most rapid increase in all classes of property has been in the last four years, the roll of 1878 showing a total taxable valuation of $1,[illegible], an increase to the present of $[illegible].

The most rapid increase in any class of property during the last year, has been in Union city property, the increase being over one-fifth of the entire amount. This steady and remarkable growth of Union county has been wholly within itself, unaided by the building of railroads and other large corporations or industries. To-day there is not a corporation or individual paying taxes in this county on $[illegible] worth of property.

The agricultural land of the county is distributed among over twenty-five hundred owners, none of whom has over four thousand acres. Large land grabbers have never gotten a foothold in this county, and it is one of the best features of the ownership of the real estate in the county, that almost every holder cultivates his own holding. We cannot, therefore, be rightly accused of trying to "boom" things in the county, when we say our present is an exceptionally prosperous one, and our immediate future peculiarly bright.

Property has risen and is rising in value at a rapid rate, and we believe it will still further advance. We think property holders are warranted in asking increased prices for their property over those of two years ago, for the reason that twelve months will put them on a par with the inhabitants of the Walla Walla country, where farming lands now rate from $20 upwards.

DR. JOHN T. WELLS.

A Sketch of his Life and a Tribute to his Professional Character and Personal Worth.

[illegible] Stark street [illegible] Dr. John T. Wells [illegible]

[illegible]

During the first three years of the war [illegible]

On returning [illegible] after completing a two years course of law, [illegible] Dr. M. Wells. Having prepared himself [illegible] medical lectures [illegible] months was [illegible] at the University of Virginia, [illegible] was taken at the University of New York, where he graduated [illegible] It was the wish of his friends [illegible] was an obstacle in his path that he could not [illegible] it was then necessary, before receiving a commission, that an oath should be taken to the effect that the applicant had not borne arms against the country. He therefore had to be contented for the present with the appointment of acting assistant surgeon, and was assigned to duty at the naval hospital in Philadelphia. From this post he was transferred to the receiving ship Vermont, at the Brooklyn navy yard, and then was assigned to duty on the receiving ship Independence, at Mare island, California.

The naval service being distasteful to him, he resigned in 1874 and located for a short time at Los Angeles, thence he removed to the Paramint mines, and thence to Visalia, where he soon acquired a large but laborious practice, extending over a wide stretch of country. Unable to endure the fatigue, he removed to Bakersfield for a year, and from this point he went to San Francisco, where in a few months he succeeded in laying the foundation of a promising practice, but finding it would take more time and means than he could then spare to establish a satisfactory practice in competition with the old and experienced surgeons and physicians of the chief emporium of the Pacific slope, he was induced to seek a field less wide and brilliant, perhaps, though one in which the opposition would be more easily surmountable; he accordingly came to this city and commenced practice in November, 1879. Here, aided by brilliant success and attractive manners, he soon built up one of the largest practices that has ever been done in the state.

He was especially fond of surgery, and has been complimented by some of the best surgeons on the coast for his skill in this branch of the profession. His active practice may be said to be concentrated within a period of ten years, into which he crowded a large amount of arduous work. In this interval he performed ovariotomy three times, each time with full success. That most difficult of operations for which Marion Sims was famous and which Velpeau declared to be successfully impracticable, many surgeons in this city saw Dr. Wells perform with the happiest result the patient being restored by it from misery to health and vigor. He was successful in the performance of the rare and difficult operation of excision of the hip joint, also of many of the major amputations, operations for hernia, for club-foot, strabismus, cataract, and a host of the minor surgical expedients that it would be tedious to name. All were done with skill, and almost all with the greatest results; and we must bear in mind that it is not for man at all times to command success. He was endowed with unusually acute perceptive faculties, and thus enabled to diagnose with a view to quickness and precision, and with it to determine what was to be done without undue delay. Though here was his principal field of action, not only was he distinguished as a surgeon; as a physician his qualifications were of an unusually high order, and he has communicated to journals and transactions of medical societies many valuable papers, among which may be mentioned a paper on ergot, in which he was the first to suggest its use in pneumonia and other inflammatory afflictions; and one on diphtheria, written in 1877, and published in the transactions of the California state medical society. Whatever he has written on he has illuminated, and his papers have always been commended by the ablest judges.

Naturally inclined to friendship, where true and just, [illegible] his social qualities were most genial and attractive. With the classical [illegible] he also possessed in an eminent degree the [illegible] In these qualities lie the magnetism that draws all hearts, hence much of his success. His generosity to the poor was conspicuous wherever he lived, and his sympathy with the sick and suffering outweighed every other consideration. Here only he forgot himself in generous devotion to the welfare of others.

He was a Mason in high standing of the order, by which his obsequies will, I presume, be duly honored.

Let me say in conclusion that this poor notice is the disinterested tribute of a sincere professional friend. Alas! the last and only one that he can render.

Daniel Webster's cook was a colored woman named Monica McCarty, who was born a slave of John Craugh, of Washington. Mr. Webster purchased her freedom for $600, with the understanding that she was to work it out. He paid her her wages, however, without any reference to the obligation, and as she received many presents from the family and visitors, she had, when Mr. Webster died, about $2000 in the savings bank. She was certainly an admirable cook, as every one who enjoyed Mr. Webster's hospitality could testify. True, she knew but little about French dishes, entrees and entremets, but no one could send to the table roast meat, or fish, or game cooked better than that from the kitchen over which Aunt Monica presided. Her bread was remarkably excellent, and she was well versed in the making of griddle cakes, waffles, biscuits and other Maryland delicacies.—Boston Journal.

Near Charlotte, N. C., a young son of Joe Faulkner was left in charge of the engine at his father's mill. While showing some playmates what he knew about the machinery he was caught in a belt and literally torn to pieces. The story, somehow, makes us think of Don Cameron.—Boston Post.

Good and Bad Mining News—Master Putnam's Body—Discovery of a Great River—Starvation and Death.

[illegible]

[illegible] The Corwin proceeded to Point [illegible] Captain Healy [illegible]

On August 18th spoke whaling barks George and Susan, Francis Palmer, and Abraham, Lark Sea Breeze and brig Hidalgo, all nearly empty. Anchored at night off U. S. signal station at Cape Smyth, about 10 miles south of Point Barrow. Lieut. Ray and party of eight men are well and comfortably located. The lieutenant had made two sledge journeys during the winter one fifty miles to the interior and one a hundred miles along the coast. On the latter and toward the Mackenzie a large and hitherto unknown river was discovered, that appeared to be as large as the Missouri. It was shallow, but owing to ice they could not ascertain whether it was navigable. The Indians in the neighborhood of the station have shown signs of discontent, and the lieutenant has built a stockade and mounted a gatling gun on the tower for protection. His party are well armed with repeating rifles, and are able to look out for themselves.

The Corwin went so far north as 71 deg. 46 min., higher than she has ever been before. On Aug. 1th, spoke whaling barks "The Tom," "The Coral," "[illegible] H. Holland," "Helen Mar," "Bounding Billow," and "Fleetwing." All had met with very poor success. Next day reached longitude 150 degrees 28 minutes west, within a few miles of the return reef, the point where Sir John Franklin and party turned back in 18[illegible]. The ice becoming thick and heavy the Corwin stood to the westward homeward bound. Coaled the ship at the coal mine on Cape Sisburne. Found coal of good quality.

Bishop Seaton's body has been found and will be forwarded to San Francisco during the summer. The Corwin cruised 8,000 miles. The season has been an open one and very mild. The work done reflects great credit on Capt. Healy, officers and men, and proves the increasing efficiency of the revenue marine service.

The Adams has moored in Sitka harbor which she will make her headquarters. Her commander evinces much interest in the welfare of Alaska.

The oil works at Killisnoo are running on full time. Whales are getting plentiful there. One was caught on August 13 that will yield sixty barrels of oil.

New placer diggings are being discovered at Douglass Island of great richness. One dollar to the pan is said to have been realized.

Assistant Surgeon H. W. Yemans, of the marine hospital service, has arrived at Sitka and assumed duties. He is the first officer of the service ever stationed here.

The new missionary building is up and will be shingled in a few days.

Industrial Notes.

It is estimated that the total [illegible] British Columbia [illegible]

Two of the local factories, the North Pacific [illegible] Company, and [illegible] will add [illegible] establishments during the coming year.

Never before in the history of Portland has there been such activity among lumber dealers and manufacturers and wood workers [illegible] and planing mills are pressed to their utmost capacity to supply the demand.

The city of Baltimore is about to be made the port of [illegible] for a new line of French steamers, which are to be run by the French [illegible] Company of France, and to ply regularly between that city and Havre. The company is an [illegible] one, and owns a large fleet of magnificent steamers, that connect all the southern ports of France. Its connection with Baltimore will be of mutual advantage to the United States and France, as it places in communication largest commercial cities the products of [illegible] glass, china, potteryware, etc., which we obtain from that country, and is able to furnish her in return, our central and southwestern productions of cotton, tobacco, provisions, etc.

The Country's Fisheries.

Census Bulletin No. 296, from returns made by agents connected with the United States fishery commission, presents some remarkable statistics in regard to Massachusetts. From the tables it may be found that at the time of making up the report, 1879, 20,117 persons were actively engaged in the fisheries, to which number were added not less than 5000 persons employed in the manufacture of nets, lines, hooks, rigging and fish boxes, and the building of vessels and boats. If the families of fishermen and others dependent on the fisheries of Massachusetts are included, it is estimated that fully 100,000 persons in the state rely on this fishing industry for their support. Counting the capital invested in boats, netting, traps, wharves, buildings and factories, this represents $14,334,450, and the gross value of the product is $8,141,750. This large amount when in first hands represents, when expenses and profits of dealers are added, some $10,000,000. Fish represent $5,000,000, lobsters, clams, oil and guano are worth about $1,000,000, and to this must be added the whaling industry, the product of which was $2,000,000. Gloucester being the leading fishing port, its catch is the largest in the country. That of Marblehead is next. Gloucester put on the market in 1879, 14[illegible],026 pounds of fish, or more than half of the entire yield of the state, which was 341,916,932 pounds. The total capital invested in Gloucester in the fishing business having been $4,326,568, the sea product taken was worth $3,155,071, that of the whole state being considered as $8,141,750. Boston is the great distributing centre, but only catches fish worth $1,026,360. New Bedford, principally a whaling port, with a capital of $4,320,618, produced a return of $2,0[illegible],944. The working up of the residue of the fish forms an important item of industry, the glue made from the fish skins, employing 192 men and a capital of $315,000 producing isinglass and glue worth some $450,000. It is interesting to note that the process used in Massachusetts for making glue from fish skins has been carried to Norway, where it has become a lucrative business. Fertilizers depending on the catch of fish and offal alone, in a crude condition, almost $200,000 worth of fish. To keep the fish 75,000,000 pounds of ice was consumed, and for curing, 70,000,000 pounds of salt. Cod being the most important fish, in pounds, 172,216,035 were taken in the state; of haddock, 24,0[illegible],890 pounds, and of halibut, 14,205,916. The value of the cod was $1,544,311; haddock, $2[illegible],311; and halibut, $360,840. Blue-fish represent a value of $127,541. Referring to the menhaden fisheries, 26,076,057 pounds were taken, worth $36,677. From these figures some idea can be had of the immensity of the fishery business of Massachusetts alone, and what an important factor it becomes in the general industries of the country.

THE DOWNFALL OF THE FLAT.

That Recent Innovation in New York Dwellings Are only on the Decline.

New York [illegible]

[illegible]

"What then?" asked the [illegible]

"Oh, then, that is where a good deal of trouble [illegible] other matters are [illegible] I have [illegible] Do you know [illegible] And then [illegible] about [illegible] of their previous experience [illegible] intended at present?" inquired the reporter.

"Yes, it is for these reasons people are not going into flats so much. [illegible] The rents for flats are still too high. Rents have fallen since last year, and a flat that could [illegible] for $40. But it will come down [illegible] to $30 before it is taken. [illegible] are more inconvenient [illegible] were stylish and popular while they were [illegible] but their day in those respects have passed. They have degenerated in popular estimation to what they really always have been [illegible] When you live in [illegible] two [illegible] below, who are [illegible] The street entrance is always as public as a [illegible] You can not regulate the incoming or outgoing of any one, and if any of the people living in the house are of irregular habits as [illegible] you can not assure yourself of rest at night."

"Then the erection of flats has been overdone?" continued this [illegible] person. "It has been considered the best paying investment by the [illegible] people. Thousands of flats are [illegible] between [illegible] street and Harlem river, but this [illegible] I know of two men who were going to build five large flat houses each, but seeing the turn in the popular taste, they have given up the idea. And rents for flats will soon be [illegible] A good thing for the capitalists to do now would be to build houses for two families each. That is the sort of houses many are looking after at present. People would rather pay a high rent for a part of such a house than a low rent for a flat. They want room for the children, and the women, especially those who have lived in flats, would rather [illegible] than [illegible] about the premises.

"The flat was a craze," continued the speaker, "and considering the [illegible] nature of the people of New York, its popularity lasted a long time. Now that the flats are erected, they will be inhabited by hundreds of thousands of [illegible] but not all [illegible] in time they will be no better than the [illegible] old tenement houses down town and on the east side. The gloss and glitter will vanish. Except at the most expensive of these houses, the [illegible] will vanish [illegible] and the staircase carpets will [illegible] by [illegible] at all. I hear already from landlords that they do not intend to re-carpet the staircases, because they can not afford to do it. They thought while the rents were good and they were realizing from [illegible] per cent. on these investments they were willing to continue the style, but now that they are realizing only [illegible] per cent., they must economize."

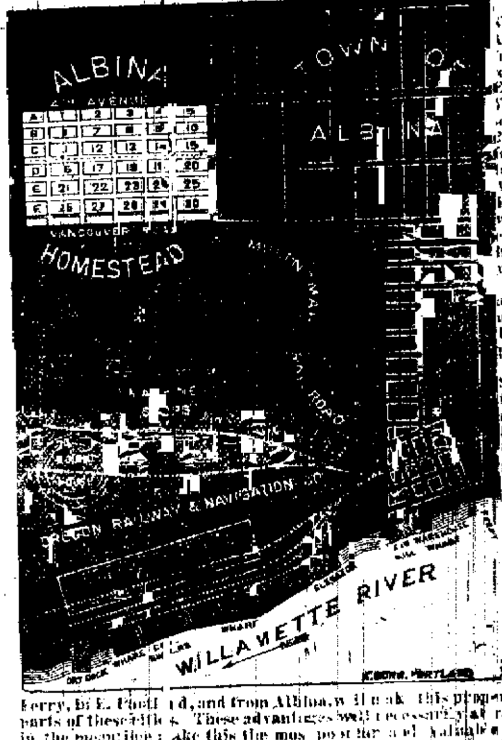
PORTLAND



THE ALBINA HOMESTEAD is situated next to Albina, and between and fronting on both the extension of Fourth street, East Portland, and the Vancouver road. All the lots in Blocks 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30 are 50x120 feet, with twenty-foot alleys through the blocks. All the other lots are 50x100 feet. The streets are wide and have all been cleared, while the lots are high and level and can be very easily cleared.

We now offer for sale for a short time, a limited number of these Lots and Blocks at reasonable prices and on easy terms.

THE ALBINA HOMESTEAD is unquestionably the best field for investment and the most desirable place for location now in the market. Its close proximity to the cities of Portland and East Portland, and to the heavy improvements now being carried out by the various companies under the direction of Mr. Villard—the Dry Docks, Elevators, Machine Shops, and other works of these companies—its nearness also to the Albina Ferry, together with the proposed Multnomah Railway from L street Ferry, East Portland, and from Albina, will make this property very accessible from all parts of these cities. These advantages will necessarily attract a large population, and in the meantime make this the most [illegible] suburban property in this vicinity, while in the near future it must furnish homes for the rapidly increasing population of Albina, and then its value will be at least [illegible] times what we now offer it for. The property and full information given to all who may apply to
